Joseph Yu

The concept of Zheng Shen and Ling Shen is well known to most traditional feng shui practitioners. It refers to the Luo Shu and its reversed path. This is most useful in site selection. However, we do not apply this to interior design.

The concept of Zheng and Ling is examined in more details using the 64 hexagrams instead of the 8 trigrams. This obviously gives a more detailed analysis of the site. It is highly valued by yin-house feng shui practitioners.

What about yang-houses?

The 64 hexagram chart is the detailed energy chart of earth qi. Human beings live on earth and therefore the understanding of the earth qi is very important. The proper earth qi supported by the proper forms of mountain and water will give people blessing.

The year, month, day and hour can also be expressed in terms of the hexagrams. Some combinations are good while others are not so good. The birth year, month, day and hour of a person can also be expressed in terms of hexagrams. How these hexagrams match the earth qi and heaven qi will involve the study of the hexagram relationships.

In this course, I will explain step by step how to integrate Heaven, Earth and Man by means of the communications of the hexagrams. This is the key to prosperity and success.

Xuan Kong Da Gua is NOT telling you where you should put water in a house. The experimental tolerance does not justify such practices. Feng Shui is not about where to place water but rather how to tap into the proper yang qi to bring prosperity and how to enjoy the yin qi to make life a success. This is what Xuan Kong Da Gua is about.

In short, Xuan Kong Da Gua is about integrating Heaven, Man and Earth qi in the most beneficial way. It is about communication and integration. This seminar will be an eye-opener to feng shui enthusiasts. It will unveil the mysterious look some people inappropriately created. This is not a seminar about useless formulas. It tells you how to use effectively Heaven qi and Earth qi to enhance your Human qi. You can apply this technique to create your personalized calendar to bring you prosperity and success.
